BIO

David Chung's acting career began next to a campfire in the San Bernardino mountains. What started out as a camp counselor performing silly sketches for inner city youth, quickly grew into a full fledged passion for acting and improvisation.

Currently, David volunteers and teaches improv to combat veterans with Post Traumatic Stress Disorder through the non-profit organization Laughter For A Change (L4C). Incredibly proud of his work, L4C brings comedy and laughter into communities where a good laugh is in short supply.

David was recognized for Outstanding Achievement in Acting by the Pasadena City College Theater Arts Faculty in 2009. In addition to acting he is also the Co-Founder and Director of Marketing for Baghaus.com, a leading e-commerce destination for women's handbags and fashion accessories.
